2.2.1 —

Facilitating the Process

Orientation Program

An Orientation Program is conducted at the beginning of the academic year to give an overview of teaching-learning practices, examination systems, and other student-centric activities. This helps set expectations and ensures a smooth transition for new students.

Student Profiling

Class teachers maintain detailed profiles of students, including their academic and socio-economic backgrounds. This helps identify specific needs and provide tailored support for individual students.

Activities to Address Slow Learners

- Bilingual explanation for students to ensure understanding.
- Encouraging and practicing peer learning.
- Conducting personality development sessions to motivate and build confidence.
- Remedial class for slower learner.
- Offering periodic tests to boost confidence and improve subject understanding.
- Counseling special hits and techniques for slow learner

Methods Adopted to Facilitate Advanced Students

- Encouraged to write research articles and present papers.
- Opportunities to plan and organize intra-college events, seminars, guest lectures, and workshops.
- Roles as student coordinators and members in various clubs, committees, and cells to showcase organizational, leadership, and team-building skills.
- Appreciation awards for curricular, co-curricular, extracurricular achievements, and contributions to extension activities.
- Encouraged to join SWAYAM (MOOC) courses for advanced learning.
- Guidance provided for competitive exams such as NET, SET, GATE, and PSC.
- Motivating PG students to deliver lectures to UG classes, enhancing their teaching and presentation skills.
